One of the most unusual attractions of the Rocky Mountain region is the annual public hike sponsored by the Boulder Chamber of Commerce to the famous Arapaho Peak and Glacier. This glacier which is the largest in Colorado is owned by the City of Boulder; thus, Boulder is the only city in America actually owning a glacier as its source of water supply. The altitude of the glacier is 12,000 feet while Arapaho Peak rises to 13,500 feet.
